INSERT your response here from the PRE-SURVEY:

Employability means having the possession of a range of high-value skills, values, characteristics, and knowledge which can be applied into a desired professional workplace. It means bringing qualities to the field to make a significant contribution.

INSERT your response here from the POST-SURVEY:

Employability involves having experience in the related field and possessing the technical as well as soft skills that would make a significant contribution. This is what appeals to employers the most and this also includes resumes, linkedin profiles and "me in a minute" (MIM) scripts. As of right now, also forming a pre-professional experience plan is beneficial in outlining your career goals and keeping track of your next steps. Ultimately, this is all vital in enhancing your employability.

Towards improving your employability:

Things I could do before the end of the trimester include finalising my application for the 'Me at Deloitte' two-day program and proceeding with the required steps, updating my LinkedIn profile and refining my resume.
